“No One Left Behind: Global Health, Access to Care, Inequalities and Migration”

Rome, July 10th 2017
Istituto Superiore di Sanità

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development is a plan of action for people, planet and prosperity. Its goal, among others, is to promote physical and mental health, well-being, extended life expectancy, universal health coverage, access to quality health care by improving gender equality, the economic empowerment and education for women and girls and the reduction of inequalities. The 2030 Agenda offers a major opportunity to improve global health and end disparities in access to health-care by promoting a more holistic approach, which recognizes the interdependence between health and development. This is clearly reflected in Sustainable Development Goal 3, with its wide-ranging objective to ensure health and well-being for all. There is a bold commitment to end the epidemics of AIDS, tuberculosis, malaria and other communicable diseases by 2030, and to achieve universal health coverage, with no one left behind.

Despite the considerable progress made in global health in the past twenty years, inequities, not just in terms of income or wealth, but also in terms of access to health systems, still persist. Achieving the targets set in the 2030 Agenda and ensuring health and well-being for all, with particular attention to vulnerable populations such as migrants and people living in areas of crisis, requires strong global leadership.

Italy will hold the Presidency of the G7 until the end of 2017. It has taken the decision to focus on issues related to migration, the environment and global health during the upcoming G7 Summit, which will be held in Taormina on 26-27 May 2017. It will be an opportunity to highlight the latest achievements in global health while debating and discussing actions to be taken around the many upcoming challenges and to achieving the Agenda 2030 targets.

The G20 summit, currently chaired by Germany, will be held in Hamburg 7-8 July 2017 and will represent an additional opportunity to demonstrate strong commitment for the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the Addis Ababa Action Agenda and global health.

In consideration of these important events, a high level meeting in Italy, jointly organised by the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and International Cooperation, Friends of the Global Fund Europe, and the Global Fund, after the G7 and G20 Summit, would be an opportunity to take stock of the outcomes and support preparations for the G7 Health Ministerial Meeting which will take place in Milan on 5 November 2017.

Objective

To increase awareness of global health inequities and inform Italian stakeholders of the outcomes of the G7 and G20 in relation to global health; to discuss upcoming challenges in relation to SDGs, global health and migration issues, to present best practices and strategic priorities for improving global health and achieving the SDGs.
